A Unique Find: A “New” Work by Martinů

Until recently, the existence of Bohuslav Martinů’s “Romance for Violin and Piano” H 186^{bis}, composed in 1930, was entirely unknown, especially since the composer himself had not mentioned the work in any of his handwritten catalogues of works. In 2022, Natálie Krátká, a musicologist from the Bohuslav Martinů Institute in Prague, discovered the composition by chance in the National Library of Israel in Jerusalem – a truly unique find of a completely unknown work from the estate of the French photographer of Boris Lipnitzky of Ukrainian-Jewish origin, with whom Martinů was friends during his stay in Paris.

The short, delicately melancholy work received its world premiere on 10 January 2023 at the Wigmore Hall in London and was performed by Frank Peter Zimmermann and Martin Helmchen. The “Romance” is now appearing in print for the first time.

With this publication, the violin repertoire is enriched by a further work by Martinů. Due to its short duration (approx. three minutes), it is well-suited as an encore piece and, thanks to its technically not so demanding violin part, it can also be played by the less advanced violinist.

- First edition of a newly discovered composition by Martinů
- An enrichment of the violin repertoire, also for less advanced violinists
- With a Foreword on the history and discovery of the work (Cz/Eng/Ger) and a Critical Commentary (Eng)

Although Sergei Rachmaninoff only left behind a relatively small œuvre for string instrument and piano in comparison to his more substantial groups of works, these few works date from all phases of his compositional activity. Their patrons, dedicatees and important performers often came from his closest musical circle.

The chamber music for violin and piano includes the “Morceaux de salon” op. 6 (consisting of “Romance” and “Danse hongroise”), a “Romance” in A minor that was only published posthumously and Rachmaninoff’s arrangement of Modest Mussorgsky’s “Hopak”, the finale of his unfinished opera “The Sorochyntsi Fair”. These works were written as part of his friendship or indeed collaboration with violinists such as Julius Conus (1869–1942) and probably Fritz Kreisler (1875–1962).

First Edition of Virtuoso Duets for Violin and Violoncello

4. Finale

Allegro vivo (♩ = c. 152)

Chamber music holds a significant place within the extensive œuvre of Viktor Kalabis (1923–2006), one of the most significant Czech composers of the 20th century. This includes the “Duettini for Violin and Violoncello” op. 67 from 1987. Kalabis wrote this work for violinist Jana Vlachová and cellist Mikael Ericsson, who premiered it in Domažlice in 1991.

The “Duettini” consist of four expressively contrasting movements and have remained unpublished until now; the first edition is based on the autograph, which is kept in the Viktor Kalabis and Zuzana Růžicková Endowment Fund.

Gidon Kremer wrote about this virtuoso cycle: “The Duettini by Kalabis were and remain a true discovery for me ... this small work will certainly enrich the repertoire for violin and violoncello duo.” The renowned violinist made the first recording of the “Duettini” together with cellist Magdalena Ceple for Hyperion Records (CD Kremerata Baltica, Viktor Kalabis: Duettina · Chamber Music · Diptychon).

- First edition of the four virtuoso movements for violin and violoncello
- Enrichment of the chamber music repertoire for this instrumentation

Bach's Sonatas and Partitas for Viola Solo

Johann Sebastian Bach's cycle of Three Sonatas and Partitas BWV 1001–1006 for solo violin is one of the most famous string compositions of the 18th century and of the violin repertoire as a whole. With the limited resources of a single melody instrument, the composer masterfully presents the entire harmonic and polyphonic musical universe of his time.

These works have also been played on the viola for centuries. In his version for solo viola, Chung Park draws on a careful study of the revised Urtext edition of Bach's Sonatas and Partitas published by Bärenreiter and edited by Peter Wollny (BA05256). Park's edition offers elegant and idiomatic solutions to the technical challenges that arise when playing these violin works on the viola.

- Based on the Urtext edition of the work in its original version for solo violin
- Includes idiomatic solutions to the technical problems arising from the transcription of the work for viola

The arranger:

Chung Park is a conductor, violist, and educator who received his professional training at the Peabody Conservatory as well as the University of Miami. He studied viola in Hannover, Germany, with Hatto Beyerle of the Alban Berg Quartet. An experienced performer and educator, Chung Park has taught at several universities, including the University of Central Florida, Appalachian State University and the University of Chicago, and has delivered masterclasses across the United States. In 2022 he was appointed conductor of St. Olaf Orchestra, St. Olaf College, Minnesota.

After Johannes Brahms' String Sextet in G major op. 36 was published in 1866, the publisher Simrock issued arrangements of the work for other instrumentations, as was customary at the time. In 1883, a version for piano trio was published, arranged by Theodor Kirchner (1823–1903), who himself was a composer and friend of Brahms. Unlike other versions commissioned by the publisher – such as the one for piano by Robert Keller – Kirchner's met with Brahms' approval, as can be seen from a letter to Simrock: "The trios [after op. 18 and 36] give me extraordinary pleasure! If the idea was yours, then I congratulate you, but Kirchner has also realized it magnificently."

For this first Urtext edition of Kirchner's arrangement of Brahms' op. 36, the engraver's copy of the autograph of the slow movement was critically evaluated alongside the main source – the score and the parts of the first edition.

Captivating Keyboard Sonata

The composer, keyboard virtuoso and singer Marianna Martines (1744–1812), daughter of Nicolò Martines who was the master of ceremonies of the Apostolic Nuncio to Vienna, got significant support from Pietro Metastasio. Through him, she received lessons from Nicola Porpora, Joseph Haydn, Johann Adolf Hasse and Giuseppe Bonno. Charles Burney held her in high esteem, and W. A. Mozart, Salieri and Haydn took part in her influential “musical soirées” in Vienna during the 1780s and 1790s. In 1773, Martines was the first female composer to be accepted into the Accademia filarmonica in Bologna.

The most significant of her three harpsichord sonatas is presented in an Urtext edition for the first time. It dates from 1769 and remained unpublished during her lifetime. Stylistically, this imaginative work can be placed alongside Haydn’s early and middle sonatas. As a captivating repertoire piece, the “Sonata da Cimbalo” will enrich concert programmes and is also ideal for advanced harpsichord or piano lessons.

Notes on historical performance practice, a reader-friendly engraving and practical page turns invite you to rediscover this sonata.

François Couperin: “Pièces de clavecin” – Now Complete

“French musicologist Denis Herlin, who mastered the harpsichord under the tutelage of keyboard legends such as Kenneth Gilbert and Huguette Dreyfus, once more presents an exemplary edition of a classic from the harpsichord repertoire. ... In the detailed Foreword ... Herlin explains the circumstances of composition, structure, ornamentation and also touches on the question of instruments. The musical notation is of delightful clarity ... The care that Couperin gave to the engraving of his ‘Pièces de clavecin’ is attested by the interspersed facsimiles of the first print, which lend this edition a bibliophile touch.”

This Urtext edition of the “Quatrième livre” (1730) containing harpsichord pieces divided into eight ordres concludes Bärenreiter’s authoritative new edition of Couperin’s “Pièces de clavecin”. For the first time, the editor has meticulously evaluated the many copies of the original print, most of which he unearthed himself in international libraries. All variants are recorded in detail in the Critical Commentary.

Numerous facsimile illustrations and the preservation of the original print’s essential features in a modern engraving offer today’s performers a fascinating insight into the unique sound world of this music. In addition to a detailed Introduction, this comprehensive edition offers notes on historical performance practice, an extensive glossary and Couperin’s “Explication des Agréments, et des Signes” (each in Fr/Eng).

With Separate Solo Parts and Cadenza Booklet

The Concerto No. 10 for Two Pianos and Orchestra in E-flat major K. 365 plays a special role in Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's oeuvre: Alongside the Concerto for Two or Three Pianos K. 242, it is the only one written for more than one keyboard instrument. Mozart probably composed it in 1779, after his return from a trip to Mannheim and Paris. It was possibly intended for performances with himself and his sister as soloists. For the first time in a Mozart concerto, the bassoons are given their own parts which are often independent from the bass part.

This piano reduction complements the full score of this concerto which was already published in 1976 as part of the “New Mozart Edition”. It is still available alongside the corresponding performance material (BA05390). The meticulously prepared and well-manageable orchestral reduction by Martin Schelhaas is new.

The piano reduction includes separate Urtext parts for the two solo pianos with cues for the orchestral entries as well as a booklet with cadenzas by Mozart himself, Johann Nepomuk Hummel, Carl Reinecke, Camille Saint-Saëns, Josef Rheinberger and Leopold Godowsky.

- Piano reduction based on the Urtext of the “New Mozart Edition”

With Separate Solo Part and Cadenza Booklet

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 25 in C major K. 503 was composed for a cycle of four academy concerts that Mozart organised in the casino in Vienna during Advent of 1786. Although deeply engaged with the pressing work on "Le Nozze di Figaro", Mozart only composed the concerto shortly before its premiere.

This piano reduction complements the full score of this concerto already published in 1987 as part of the "New Mozart Edition". It is still available alongside the corresponding performance material (BA04742). The meticulously prepared and well-manageable orchestral reduction by Martin Schelhaas is new.

The piano reduction includes a separate piano solo part, which also contains cues for the orchestral entries: This allows the ensemble to be conducted from the piano or to improvise over the bass part in tutti passages. As no cadenza by Mozart has survived for this concerto, an additional booklet offers cadenzas by August Eberhard Müller, Philipp Karl Hoffmann, Johann Nepomuk Hummel, Friedrich Kalkbrenner, Carl Reinecke, Ferruccio Busoni, Hermann Beck and Paul Badura-Skoda.

- Piano reduction based on the Urtext of the "New Mozart Edition"
- Includes a separate solo part for rehearsal purposes and for conducting from the piano

Jakub Metelka (born 1986), who has gained international recognition for his advanced beginner piano albums (“The Secret Garden”, “Little Virtuoso” and “Modern Piano Studies”), has composed his latest collection “Puppet Theatre” for pianists who have taken approximately two years of piano lessons. This album represents Metelka’s easiest contribution to the beginner piano repertoire to date and can be seen as a “predecessor volume” to “Little Virtuoso”.

The twenty miniatures, written in simple song form, captivate with appealing, simply harmonised melodies that testify to Metelka’s natural musicality and inventiveness. With these pieces, he skillfully connects to the emotional world of children and encourages their musical imagination. At the same time, the original miniatures also appeal to older beginners.

Iris Rieg:
Fire and Colour

Modern chorale harmonization

Set of 2 Volumes

To appear in August 2025

In her two-volume organ improvisation method, Iris Rieg presents an immense wealth of creative yet systematic approaches for discovering colourful harmonies on the “queen of instruments.” She clearly demonstrates how one can experiment and play with intervals, chords, scales, rhythm patterns and much more, in styles ranging from the Renaissance to the modern era.

In the first volume, the author provides an introduction to various harmonic techniques, starting with systematic exercises based on parallel shifting musical structures (intervals, chords). The harmonisation of scales leads to interesting chord combinations, including those based on thirds and tritones. Using ostinato models, instructions are given for the conception of a virtuoso toccata.

Significant milestones in the history of organ music form the guiding principle for the second volume. Here organists become acquainted with characteristic improvisation techniques. Valuable tips for creating stylistic imitations enrich the detailed descriptions of multi-movement forms, such as concerto, mass or suite. Particular emphasis is based on romantic harmonisation (Max Reger) and French tonal aesthetics (Marcel Dupré).

The two volumes, which are ideal for self-study for students, teachers and professional organists, are aimed at those who want to start improvising in church services, but also offer inspiration to those who already improvise on a daily basis and, for example, want to create an organ symphony based on hymns in a live setting. The numerous exercises at different levels of difficulty are logically structured yet allow organists to start at any chapter and begin right away.

2. QUART- UND QUINTPARALLELEN

a) Quartparallelen in der rechten Hand

Seit der frühen Mehrstimmigkeit im 9. Jahrhundert sind uns Kompositionen rein aus Quartan und Quinten bekannt, sogenannte Organa. Beim Organum wird zu einer Hauptstimme, der Vox principalis, eine Quarte tiefer die parallel geführte Nebenstimme musiziert. Man nennt diese Vox organalis.

In unserem archaisch wirkenden Beispiel 2 (Ex. 2) begleitet die linke Hand die Quartintervalle der rechten mit Ganztonschritten. Seine Sequenzen gliedern sich in drei Viertaktphrasen, die durch Zweitakter aufgelockert sind. Der Hauptunterschied zum Quartorganum des 9. Jahrhunderts ist die Dreistimmigkeit. Sie mündet ab T. 16 in einen Choral. Wenn Du willst, transponiere diesen Choral in seine Originaltonart D-Dorisch.

 Wechsle zwischen Manualiter- und Pedaliterpiel.
Benutze mal ein, mal zwei Manuale, mal unterschiedliche Registrierungen.

 Wie klingt das Solo im Sopran gespielt, wie klingt es im Alt? Kannst Du die Melodie auch in den Bass legen?

2. PARALLEL FOURTHS AND FIFTHS

a) Parallel fourths in the right hand

We know of compositions with fourths and fifths from the early polyphonic period in the 9th century, the organa. In organum the main voice, the vox principalis, is accompanied by the vox organalis, a second voice moving in parallel motion one fourth below.

Our example 2 with its archaic effect places these fourths in the right hand and accompanies them in the left hand with whole tone steps. Its sequences are organized into three four bar phrases, punctuated by two bar phrases. The main difference between this and the organum of the 9th century with its fourths is the three-part texture, which in turn leads into a hymn from bar 16 onwards. If you want, try transposing this piece into its original key – Dorian in D.

 Change between an emphasis on the manuals and on the pedals. Use first one, then two manuals; try different registrations.

 How does the solo sound if you play it in the soprano voice, or in the alto? Try transferring it to the bass.

VIII HYMN VARIATIONS ACCORDING TO MARCEL DUPRÉ

1. THEME

My cycle is a homage to Marcel Dupré (1886–1971) and is conceived as a reference of his Variations sur un Noël. Dupré's Variations opens with the Noël tune on which the work is based. A quiet, steady crotchet pulse is the engine of this piece. I avoid playing root position chords at the strong beat.

More interesting and harmonically open are sixth and seventh chords. Passing notes, second inversion chords and added sixth chords, thirds and suspended notes enrich the harmonization. We are already familiar with dissonances approached by leap, using parallels and changing between modal and tonal harmonization.

“The manuscripts of great composers are invaluable. Unlike printed editions, they offer a direct window into the composer’s innermost world, revealing the creative process, complete with changes, corrections, and variants. The beauty of Bach’s manuscripts stands out as truly unique, singular.”

(András Schiff)

Great art in the seemingly small: What Johann Sebastian Bach initially created as the “Notebook for Friedemann Bach”, he later reworked and retitled “Auffrichtige Anleitung” (A Sincere Guide) – a first step in piano and composition training, upon which the “Well-Tempered Clavier”, the parts of the “Clavier Übung” and ultimately the “Art of Fugue” are based. To this day, the inventions and sinfonias from this “Auffrichtige Anleitung” are the first encounter with Bach’s music for many piano students worldwide.

András Schiff, for whom this work has been a companion since early childhood, describes in his Foreword what fascinates him about it: Bach’s handwriting reveals the inner movement of the music more vividly than a modern music edition ever could. Although each invention and sinfonia takes up no more than a double page, each piece has its very own distinctive character, often inspired by dances. Bach’s art reveals itself in all its grandeur in this condensed form in the smallest of spaces.

Martina Rebmann, head of the music department of the Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, describes how Bach conceived this collection and the journey the autograph manuscript has taken up to the present day.

Homage to Johann Strauß

In 1906, Maurice Ravel wrote in a letter: “What I am currently working on is not particularly demanding: a great waltz, a kind of homage to the memory of the great Strauß, not Richard, but Johann. You know my lively enthusiasm for these marvellous rhythms [...]” However the work was still subject to changes until its completion and premiere fourteen years later: Initially intended to be called “Vienna”, it was given the new name “La Valse” after the First World War. Although it might have functioned as a ballet, after the rejection by Serge Diaghilev, impresario of the Paris Ballets Russes, it was ultimately turned into an orchestral piece.

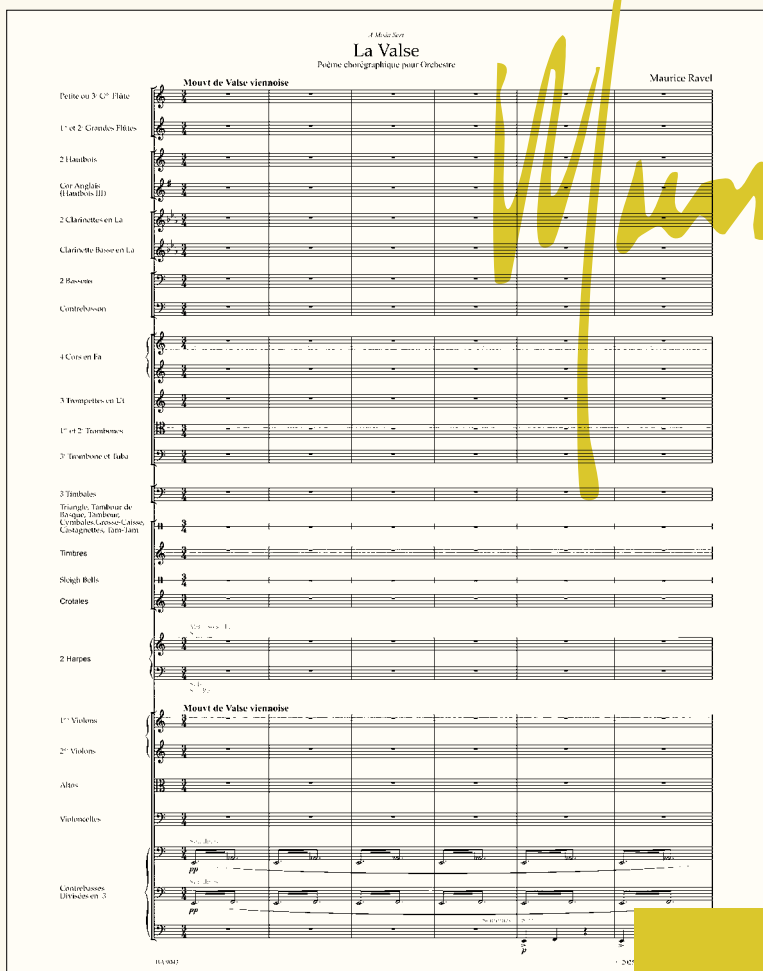

For his scholarly-critical edition, editor Douglas Woodfull-Harris has drawn on a large number of manuscript and printed sources of all instrumentations and transcriptions of “La Valse”. Of particular importance is orchestral material from the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, which was used for performances conducted by Ravel in 1928.

Symphony with an Operatic Character

SINFONIE in B

Allegro con brio Hoboken I:66

© 1970 by G. Henle Verlag, München
Bärenreiter-Verlag, Kassel 2025

Haydn composed his Symphony in B-flat major Hob. I:66 between 1775 and 1776, around ten years after taking up his post at the Esterházy Palace. At this time, the opera activities at the court were in a phase of development and the prince's chapel was expanded for opera productions. Thus Haydn was able to employ two bassoon parts for the first time in the symphonies written during that time, thereby creating a fuller sound in the woodwind section of Symphony No. 66.

Musically, this symphony is characterised by its operatic character, which corresponded to the general musical taste of the time. This is particularly noticeable in the finale “Scherzando e presto”, whose playful, irregularly structured rondo theme juxtaposes contrasting compositional techniques to great effect and foreshadows Haydn's late symphonic work.

New Issue Title

The “B-A-C-H, Perpetuum Mobile”, composed in 2016, refers to a statement by Beethoven in which he expressed admiration for the infinite richness of Bach’s compositional art. The idea of infinity inspired Bernhard Klapprott (harpsichordist, organist, director of the Institute for Early Music at the University of Music in Weimar) to create his musical perpetuum mobile. Two harpsichords merge into a large, rich sound that builds on an ostinato from nothing up to fully notated clusters. In addition to the B-A-C-H motif, the entire work is based on the three intervals underlying this motif, which are heard in various constellations. Expansive arcs of suspension evoked through rhythmic condensation, a gradual decrease in the number of parts while simultaneously shifting them to different pitches lend the work a sense of space and expansiveness. The dynamics are created by the musical texture itself, so that no changes of register are prescribed. The work emerges and fades away, ending as it began – the musical realisation of the idea of infinity.

There is little reliable information about the origin of this mass composed between 1773 and 1776. The title refers to the founder of the Order of the Brothers of Mercy, Saint John of God (1495–1550), but during the second half of the 19th century, the German nickname “Kleine Orgelmesse” (Little Organ Mass) became established. This name is not entirely accurate in terms of terminology and may even be misleading: It would be more correct to call it an “organ solo mass” since the most prominent feature of the composition is the concertante organ part, but strings are also involved. It is possible that this organ solo was composed and played by Haydn himself to showcase his virtuosity on the occasion of his appointment as organist of the Eisenstadt Castle Church in 1773.

This edition, which is based on the new revised Complete Edition volume issued by G. Henle Verlag, replaces BA04653. A new edition was deemed necessary due to the discovery of further relevant sources and the correction of numerous errors.

Missa in C / C major
KV 220 (196^b)

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
Klavierauszug von / Vocal score by Andreas Köhs

Kyrie
Allegro

Prince Archbishop Hieronymus Count von Colloredo demanded a mixed form for the masses performed in Salzburg: a Missa brevis in terms of length but with the instrumentation of a Missa solemnis with timpani and trumpets. With the Missa in C major K. 220, Mozart presented a work around 1775 that met these requirements for the first time. The work was nicknamed “Spatzenmesse” (Sparrow Mass) because of a distinctive motif played by the violins in the Sanctus and Benedictus.

For the piano part, Andreas Köhs has provided an improved orchestral reduction that optimally transfers the instrumental parts to the piano and at the same time prioritizes playability. The vocal parts are based on the Urtext of the “New Mozart Edition”.

This vocal score is compatible with the previous edition (BA05343-90), so there is no problem if some choir members use the new edition and others still use the older one. The full score and orchestral parts will continue to be available under BA05343.

Schubert Lieder Volume 11

An den Mond in einer Herbstnacht
Aloys Wilhelm Schreiber
D 614
April 1818

Mäßig

Volume 11 of the Bärenreiter Urtext edition of Schubert's lieder seamlessly follows on from the preceding volume with nine songs that were written between August and November 1817. Also included are the complete lieder from 1818 to 1819. For Schubert, these were years of crisis and new beginnings. He left his parental home for good, turned away from established models in his instrumental compositions and went in search of new themes, drawing not only on poets familiar to him, such as Johann Mayrhofer or Aloys Wilhelm Schreiber, but also on authors unknown to him, such as Franz Grillparzer or Johann Petrus Silbert. A significant role in his lied compositions during these years is played by cyclical forms, such as the four songs on hymns by Novalis or the three songs that form an entity based on texts by Mayrhofer, all of which are contained in this volume.

- Based on the Urtext of the "New Schubert Edition"
- Clear, uncluttered engraving
- Foreword by Wolfgang Thein based on the texts by Walther Dürr written for the "New Schubert Edition" on the genesis and transmission of the works as well as the source situation of each individual lied (Ger/Eng)
- Includes English translations of the lieder texts by Richard Wigmore

Musical Devotion for Voice and Organ

Tota pulchra es, Maria

Eugène Gigout
(1844–1925)

Moderato

This anthology contains a selection of thirty sacred songs from Charles Gounod to Jehan Alain for solo voice with an organ (harmonium/piano) accompaniment. The collection is dedicated exclusively to French composers and can be used for both concerts and church services. The vocal works which are listed in chronological order represent a highly fascinating repertoire, that invites the study of the development of the solo motet genre.

In addition to the 27 motets in Latin, the edition contains two French settings of the Lord's Prayer as well as a vocalise. Well-known motets such as César Franck's "Panis angelicus" or Gabriel Fauré's "O salutaris" stand alongside previously unpublished works, including settings of the Lord's Prayer by André Caplet and Émile Goué as well as the two motets "O salutaris" each with an additional instrumental part (violin, violin/ flute respectively) by Joseph-Ermend Bonnal, which are published here for the first time. Furthermore, long out-of-print pieces such as Eugène Gigout's "Tota pulchra es" and Marcel Dupré's "Memorare" are made available here again.

In the Introduction (Ger/Fr/Eng), editor Helga Schauerte-Maubouet presents the musical sources and the historical context, and addresses questions of interpretation, such as the pronunciation of the Latin text. All Latin texts are provided with translations in three languages.

This parable is a harrowing document of its time, and has lost none of its relevance today. Faced with the tyrant Overall's killing machine, Death goes on strike: His service to humankind will only be resumed when the ruler has abdicated. The one-act opera "The Emperor of Atlantis" was written and rehearsed in 1943–44 in the Theresienstadt ghetto camp, but was not performed. The composer and librettist were both murdered in Auschwitz in the fall of 1944, but the documents related to the piece miraculously survived. Since its premiere in Amsterdam in 1975, "The Emperor of Atlantis" has been staged in numerous productions worldwide and is firmly established in the repertoire.

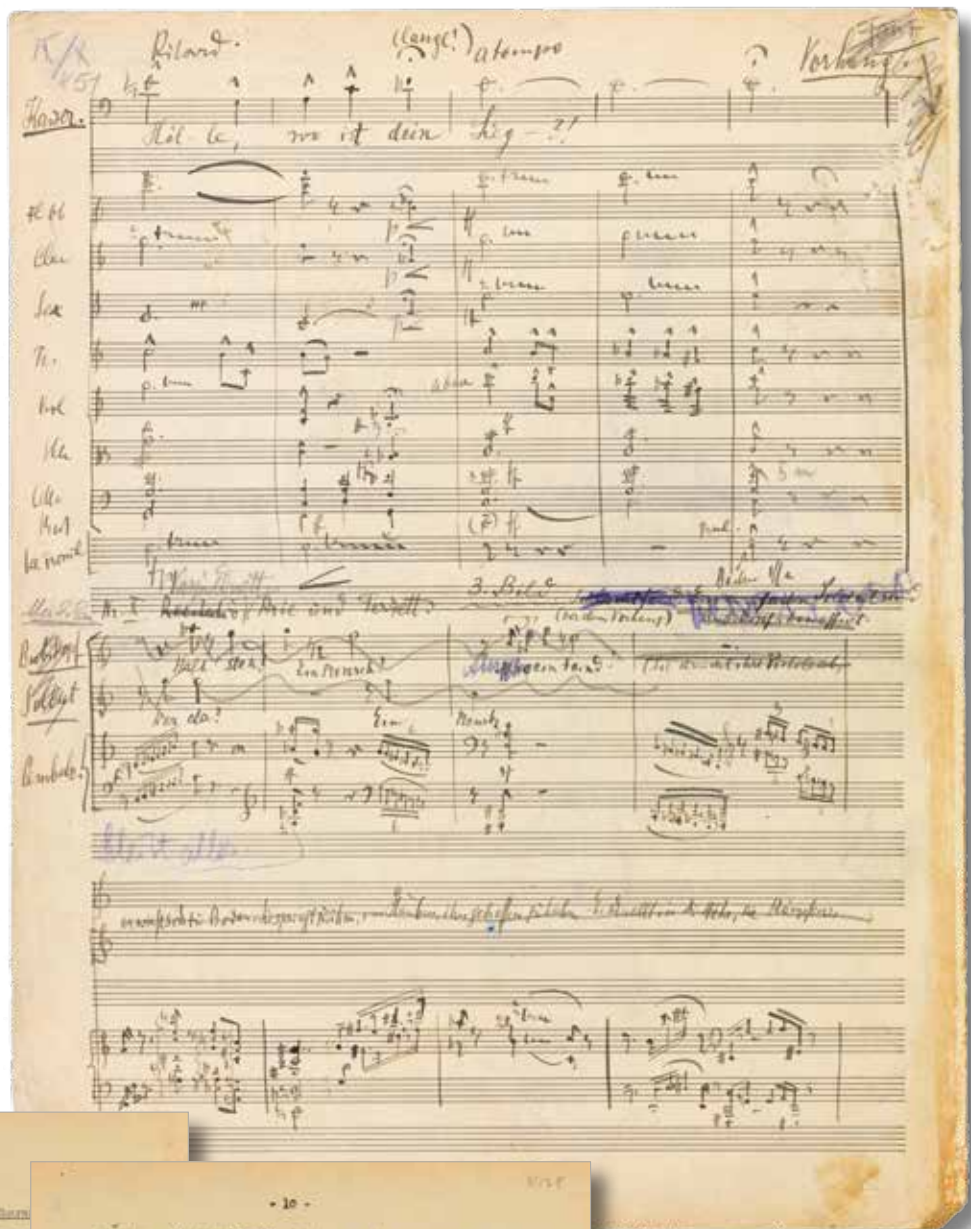

The facsimile makes the surviving sources available in a printed reproduction of the highest quality: not just Viktor Ullmann's fair copy of the score, showing numerous traces of the composer's working and revision, but also Peter Kien's manuscript libretto, together with the copy typed on data sheets by female Jewish deportees and Death's part book.

Five essays discuss the history of the work's creation and editing, musicological and stylistic questions, and also its reception over the past fifty years.

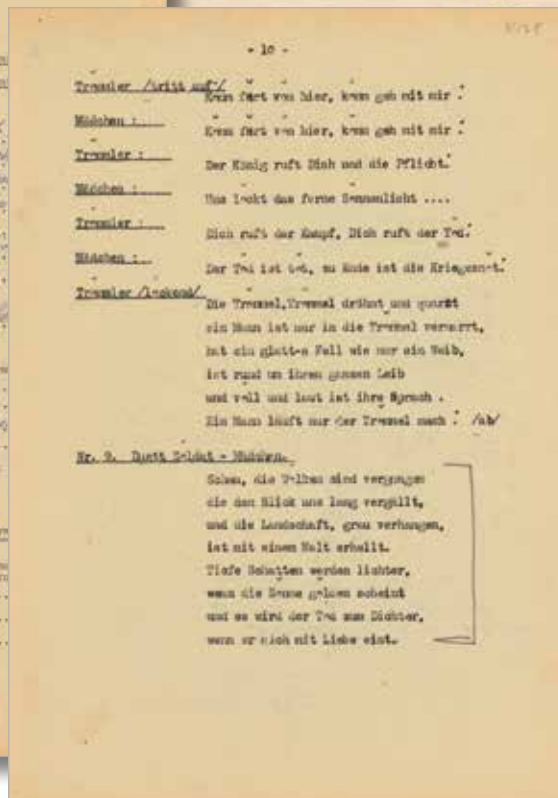

- Exceptionally important source, both musically and historically
- Reflects conditions of musical life in the Theresienstadt ghetto camp
- Allows a comprehensive understanding and informed interpretation of the work

Originally conceived as a prologue to the ballet “Les Beaux Jours de l’Amour”, the one-act opera “La Naissance d’Osiris” was only performed twice, in 1754, together with revivals of “Pigmalion” and “Les Incas de Pérou” (the second act of the opera-ballet “Les Indes galantes”). The occasion was the birth of the Duc de Berry, the future Louis XVI. There is no evidence that “La Naissance d’Osiris” was ever revived in the 18th century, probably because it was too closely linked to the occasion of the premiere. However, Rameau reused parts of the music in later works such as “Anacréon”, “Les Paladins” and “Les Boréades”.

For the content, librettist Louis de Cahusac drew on the myth of the birth of the Egyptian god Osiris, who symbolizes the newborn prince. The approximately one-hour work for four vocal soloists, choir, orchestra and dancers is written predominantly in a pastoral style.

The Musical Œuvre of Christoph Willibald Gluck

The Thematic-Systematic Catalogue (GluckWV) brings together decades of research carried out by the “Gluck Complete Edition” on the identification and transmission of Christoph Willibald Gluck’s musical oeuvre. In addition to the works that have been preserved in their entirety, works that have only survived in part or are only known through references have been assigned a GluckWV number. For the first time, the catalogue also presents a comprehensive listing of works that were falsely attributed to Gluck (corrigenda).

The main section of the catalogue of works describes Gluck’s music and its transmission using key dates and incipits. The 50 operas form the main part of this listing, while 76 ballets are also documented, of which roughly one third have survived.

This volume of the GluckWV stands as an independent publication alongside the online version, presenting additional research data and offering well-structured tables with summarised synopses in the appendix.

Contents

2. Ballets
3. Music for other stage works
4. Non-dramatic vocal music
